“Speak Up – For Your Career”

The Importance of Oral Communication

Stage fright, sweaty palms, butterflies – for many of us these often describe our feelings about public speaking. But public speaking is a crucial skill for success in any profession. Discussion and debate frequently have far more impact on decision-making than excellent, but unread, written reports. Oratory and rhetoric are no longer found in the typical college curriculum, but you can acquire and improve your skills in oral communication. Learn about the many facets of public speaking and some of the options available to help you develop your proficiency.

Speaker

Mr. Ray Whipple is a Senior Research Engineer in the Flight Dynamics Branch of the NASA Langley Research and Technology Directorate. He is a charter member of the NASA Langley Toastmasters Club. He is also a past President of the club and a past Area Governor of the Toastmasters International organization.
